By Associated Press.
BOSTON, March 15.—The British steamer Sagamore, which sailed from here on February 21 for Liverpool, has been sunk by a submarine, according to word received here today. No Americans were aboard.

The Sagamore was armed with a 4.7 inch gun and carried a general cargo, including munitions for the British. The boat and cargo was valued at $1,500,000.

The Sagamore registered 5,036 tons gross and was built in Belfast in 1902. It was stated at the British consulate here today that two Americans had signed as firemen in the Sagamore crew the day before the vessel's departure. They were Michael Halpin and John Henry of Boston. While having no positive information on this.

RUSSIANS PURSUE TURKS ON CAUCASIAN FRONT

PETROGRAD, Mar. 15.—The Turks are in retreat on the Caucasian front pursued by the Russians, the war office announced. Kermanshah has been captured.

FRENCH MINISTER OF WAR HAS RESIGNED

PARIS, March 15.—General Louis Lyautey, who resigned as minister of war yesterday, was apparently the victim of his ignorance of parliamentary methods. Like most generals who have been ministers of war in the past he soon found himself ill at ease in his position, being unable to adapt himself to political life.

GERMANY'S RUTHLESS WAR TO CONTINUE, SAYS GERARD

WASHINGTON, Mar. 15.—Information which reached here yesterday that Germany might be contemplating attacking the campaign of ruthlessness to avoid war with the United States. From evidence he has brought and that gathered from other sources, President Wilson and State Department officials expect Germany is fully determined to continue submarine warfare in violation of international law in face of the probability that such a course probably will lead to war with the United States. President Wilson will continue with his plans to put the United States in a state of armed neutrality, and this will continue until Germany forces a clash with an armed merchantman.

REVOLUTION IN RUSSIA, IS REPORT

BERLIN, March 15.—There has been a successful revolution in Russia, according to the Overseas News Agency, the official German news bureau.

The imperial ministers, the advisers state, were dismissed and locked up. The people of Petrograd and the towns there numbering 30,000, are declared to have supported the revolutionaries who hold complete possession of the capital. Order is said to have been completely restored.

STOCKHOLM, Wednesday, March serious disturbances in Russia are published in Swedish newspapers.

One publishes a statement that a railroad bridge over the Aava river was dynamited. Especially violent riots are reported to have occurred in Petrograd on Saturday, shops being stormed by mobs. According to reports, newspapers suspended publication and authorities posted placards warning the people to remain indoors. Another newspaper says travelers from Petrograd report similar disturbances there Friday and that soldiers were compelled to use sabers and many were wounded.

TURKS NOW 30 MILES SOUTH OF BAGDAD

With the exception of the notable German retirement on the Franco-Turkish front, whether voluntary or forced, is still on, the most interesting military movements at present in progress are those in Western Persia and Mesopotamia.

Disorganized by their defeats at Kut-el-amara and before Bagdad, the Turkish forces in that section of Mesopotamia are retreating up the Tigris and at last reports were more than 30 miles to the north of Bagdad.

Eastward across the Mesopotamian border in Persia, two columns of Russians are advancing toward the line of the Turkish retreat driving other Turkish forces before them. One of these columns has captured Kermanshah, about 90 miles from the Mesopotamian border after defeating the Turks in a two days' battle. In reaching Kermanshah it has already advanced near 100 miles since capturing Hamadan on March 3.

On the Franco-Belgian front operations aside from those of the British on the Somme front, the current statement reports little of note. Raids have taken place in several sectors along the back line. The recent epic fighting in the Champagne has died down to artillery action.

GERARD AMPLIFIES HIS REPORT TO GOVERNMENT

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Former Ambassador Gerard remained in Washington today prepared to amplify his report to the State Department concerning conditions in Germany when he left and his treatment by German authorities. He was due to leave for New York today to attend a reception arranged for him there tomorrow and probably will return in a few days.

GERMAN WITHDRAWAL ON

LONDON, Mar. 15.—Brigadier General Frederick S. Morris, chief director of military operations at the British front, today told the Associated Press that the withdrawal of the Germans from the Boulogne line on the Somme front was taking place faster than anticipated and that the whole new line might be on the reverse side of the Bapaume ridge.

TRAINMEN MAY AGREE ON EIGHT HOUR DAY AND PAY FOR NINE; MANAGERS CONFER

By Associated Press.
NEW YORK, March 15.—With no announcement as to whether any agreement had been reached, the joint conference of the four railroad brotherhoods and the railroad managers, called to consider the demands of the brotherhoods for an immediate settlement of the eight hour controversy, adjourned after an hour's discussion until 4 o'clock this afternoon.

W. G. Lee, spokesman for the brotherhoods, said that in the meantime no statement of what had occurred would be made by either side. It was learned, however, that the adjournment was taken to give time for the managers to consider a separate session the ultimatum presented by the chiefs threatening a strike unless their demands were complied with. The managers were to give their answer at 4 o'clock.

The managers began consideration of their answer. No counter proposition, it was learned, was made by them to that of the brotherhoods. They simply listened to the employees' spokesmen with little comment on their part, it was said.

An impression was gained, however, that both sides were in a conciliatory mood and were willing to thresh their controversy out if there seemed a possible chance of reaching an agreement. It was believed by some that the managers during their interim conference would form a counter proposition in which case there is possibility that the joint conference would go over until tomorrow.

It was stated that a proposition to get an eight hour day with pay for nine instead of 10 would be acceptable to the men.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Franz Karl Jellman, former consul general to the Philippines, Guam and Sulu Islands, is traveling back and forth on the Pacific, unable to find hospitable shores upon which to land. He was expelled from Manila following the break with Germany and was sent to Japan, where he was refused safe conduct. He then was forced to continue his journey to Honolulu, which being an American port, could not receive him.

It was decided to send him back by the next boat direct to China, but because of China's break with Germany he will again be refused permission to land.

CHILDREN LEAVE
BURNING SCHOOL*No Confusion Among Pupils of South
Connellsville High School When Roof Takes Fire.

When fire of unknown origin broke out in the South Connellsville high school building early this afternoon, the pupils left the building in an orderly way, entirely without confusion, and even had the blaze been much larger than it was, all would have been safe. School had just opened when the fire broke out.

The roof of the structure was slightly damaged. The fire was confined to the roof by the combined efforts of the South Connellsville firemen and the Connellsville department, summoned for fear the blaze might become a dangerous one.

The Connellsville track left for the scene of the fire shortly after 1 o'clock and returned about 2. The firemen took some time from the roof, but aside from this there was little damage. The cause of the blaze is a mystery to the firemen.

HORSES IN PERILStruggle to Extricate Team From Stallion Below Bridge.

The city team, driven down to the Yough this morning, in order that some refuse might be dumped into the river, went just a little too far, and quite a struggle was necessary before it could be hauled back to the street again.

The team was driven down the slope at the side of the west end of the bridge. Unable either to back up or to turn, the horses stood with their fore feet in the water, until Street Commissioner William McCormick approached and gave orders for the men to unhitch them and to push the wagon up the slope. Quite a crowd gathered on the bridge to look the situation over.

NEGRO WHO REFUSES TO PAY
FINE OR WORK ON STREETS
GOES TO DUNGEON FOR WEEK

When Joan Swan, colored, was brought before Mayor R. M. Mottola this morning for sentence, having refused to work on the streets yesterday, he declared quite emphatically that he was disgusted with the way in which police affairs were administered in Connellsville. After the mayor had fined him $30, Swan remarked that he could pay but would not help along the police if he got a million years. For contempt of court and disorderly conduct, Swan will be confined to the "dungeon" for one week, and will then be sentenced to a jail term.

Joe Batters, John Trammell and Neal Adders, all colored, got 30 day jail sentences for refusing to work on the streets.

Joe Duley, who put down a quart of whiskey from Harry Williams of Indian Creek at Duley's livery stable yesterday, had Patrolman Shipley a long chase before he was captured. Duley tapped Williams' gun on the head and took the whiskey just as Shipley came into view. In trying to pass the bottle to a man in a buggy, Duley let it fall and break. "You won't get the quart," he told the officer. "I don't want the quart, I want you," was the reply. Duley started to run with the cop just behind him. After reaching Sligo, they turned back and traveled through the Pineau district. Shipley finally catching his man on McCormick avenue. Duley got 30 days in jail, and Williams, who was charged with drunkenness, got three days of street work after police court hearings this morning.

Charles McBride made his fourth appearance in four days at the police court this morning. Charles paid $2.25 and was released.

URGE POSTPONING
NEW ROAD WORK*Declare It Will Take Laborers Away
From Coke Plants and Other Industries.

Because of the present scarcity of labor, large manufacturing firms of the region have begun an agitation against the building of new roads, or the making of other public improvements at this time since such work would seriously curtail the output of the regular established industries.

To this end, a company employing thousands of men in the coke region has addressed a letter to the commissioners of Fayette and Westmoreland counties setting forth its views in the matter.

Those favoring the postponement of public improvements say that it will be hard to complete roads begun this summer, and any progress made at all will be necessarily slow, because of the difficulty in securing workmen. The cost of such work will be much higher, too, it is supposed, than in normal times. It may even be 25 to 50 per cent higher, it has been estimated.

Should the road work, building of street car lines, and railroads, and other new work, be postponed, it is argued, it would be better to complete in a shorter time and with much less expense. Further than that, it would very likely prevent unemployment.

If the elaborate building programs planned in Fayette and neighboring counties are carried out, labor will necessarily be taken from the farms, from the coke plants, from the mines, factories and mills. While it is not expected that the industries would be crippled, they would certainly be hampered to a great extent, it is said. There are practically no unemployed workmen in the section just now, and laborers would have to be drawn from agricultural and industrial pursuits to construct the roads.

Those favoring the postponement of the improvement programs until "normal times" insist that they are not at all opposed to "good roads" or to any of the improvements in themselves. They consider that labor should be conserved, however, for the important industries of the section, and they feel that the construction of new roads, and similar work, is unwise at this time. Several roads begun last year are still unfinished, labor having been practically impossible to obtain. Road construction, when not rushed to completion in a good deal of a haphazard, it is claimed.

The Westmoreland county commissioners are reported to favor a partial postponement, at least, of road construction. Whether the Fayette county commissioners will take the same view of the matter is uncertain as yet.

DERRICK BREAKSArm of Big Lift on High School Job Falls While Raising Big Beam.

While lifting a five ton steel beam to its place in the auditorium of the new high school building yesterday morning, the big wooden beam on the derrick of Lawrence & Critchfield, the contractors, broke. Luckily the beam did not fall far and no damage was done. No one was hurt.

Work on the building was delayed while a new beam was put in place but the construction went ahead again today.

The high school contractors received a carload of face brick yesterday and a shipment of stone. This will enable them to rush the brick work in the next few days.

Indications are that the high school will be completed well within the specified time.

GIVES BAIL.Foreman Fines $500 to Secure
His Appearance for Hearing.

Clarence Foreman, against whom two charges of felonious cutting have been made, furnished $500 bail for a hearing last night and was released from the lockup here. The hearing will be held when Foreman's victims are able to leave the hospital and to appear against him.

It is likely that the case will be settled, it was intimated this morning, without going to court. Foreman and the men he cut, Dal Watson and Joseph Clark, were always good neighbors until the fight.

He was brought to Connellsville and removed to the Cottage State Hospital where it was discovered that amputation of a part of the mashed fingers was necessary.

SOUSA'S CONCERT FINE

Audience at Armory is Small but Very Enthusiastic.

John Philip Sousa's world-famous band played a concert yesterday afternoon at the Armory here. The audience was, as the saying goes, "small but appreciative." The applause was thunderous at the conclusion of Sousa's own rendition of his "Stars and Stripes Forever," played as an encore.

The soloists were particularly good. Miss Lucille Simmons sang "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," from "Samson and Delilah," and her encore, "Poor Butterfly," was pleasing. Joseph Marchage, harpist, was another favorite with the audience.

Workman Loses His Roll in Fire at Swissvale.

When the machine shop of the Union Switch & Signal Co., at Swissvale was destroyed recently by fire, Robert Hecks, an employee, lost $500 which he had hidden behind a picture above his work bench—another instance of the folly of keeping your funds anywhere except in a good bank.—The First National of Connellsville, for instance, where money is safe and liberal interest is paid.—Adv.

George W. Wishart, who was operated on at the Columbia hospital, Wilkinsburg, last Friday, is getting along fairly well. Over a year ago Mr. Wishart entered the Mercy hospital, Pittsburgh, and was later taken to the Columbia hospital.

Special Curries Sousa.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes
—Most Women Can Have.
Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known
Ohio Physician.

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years rated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them
Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, you will know them by their olive color.
These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.
If you have a pale face, yellow hair, dark eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a little no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.
Thousands of women as well as men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep in the pink of condition. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

HEALS RUNNING SORES AND CONQUERS PILES

Also Stops Itching of Eczema in Four Days.

"I feel it my duty to write you a letter of thanks for your wonderful Peterson's Ointment. I had a running sore on my leg for one year. I began to use Peterson's Ointment three weeks ago and now it is healed."—A. C. Gilchrist, 705 Reed St., Erie, Pa.

I'd rather get a letter like that, says
Peterson, than have John D. Rockefeller give me a thousand dollars. It does me a lot of good to be able to be of use to my fellow man.
For years I have been selling through druggists a large box of Petersen's Ointment for 25 cents. The healing power in this ointment is marvelous. Eczema goes in a few days.
Old sores heal up like magic; piles that other remedies do not seem to even relieve are speedily conquered.

BABY TOO WEAK TO CRY

Mrs. E. S. Fuhrman of Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin, writes us: "Little Baby James came to us one Friday afternoon in a most precarious condition—a sad case of malnutrition, being too weak to even cry. The doctor called and at once prescribed Thompson's Food (Peptonized)."

"Sunday morning we weighed him (he was four months old, but just an infant) and he weighed six pounds. The following Sunday he was weighed again and tipped the scales at eight pounds—a gain of two pounds in one week. Began to improve immediately and was soon on the way to healthy babyhood."

This unsolicited letter is one of many that we receive from week to week.
Thompson's Food (Peptonized) is not a milk modifier, but a complete food in itself. It is very easily prepared by the mere addition of water. Its use eliminates the danger usually associated with the local milk supply.

GIRLS! HAVE WAVY, THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Save Your Hair! Double Its Beauty in a Few Moments—Try This!

If you care for heavy hair, that gleams with beauty and is radiant with life, has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Dandruff.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots flinch, loosen and die, then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Dandruff at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Dandruff. It eventually—why not now?—Adv.

THE GETTING-WELL STAGE OF GRIP

Most Dangerous Period—How to Gain Strength.

The long pull in getting over the grip demands that all the organs of the body be kept in their best working form, not only to drive out the poison left by the grip germs, but that the patient shall regain strength as soon as possible to avoid further attacks resulting from the poisons in the system, paralyzing the greater part of the tissues of the body and the organs which they compose.

Forced nutrition is a means toward good health after the grip—as it is a means of preventing the entrance of the grip germ to the system. Father John's Medicine treats grip and builds up the body because it is all pure, nourishment and free from opium, morphine, calomel or other poisonous drugs. Father John's Medicine has had 60 years' success for colds and throat troubles, coughs and sore throats, and as a tonic and body builder.—Adv.

Smithfield.

Residents and property owners on the north side of West Main street are becoming excited over the removal of coal from the old Craig bank which lies on the south side of West Main street. They fear they are getting over the line and are now removing the coal from under the street and will if something is not done to stop them, eventually be over on their property.

The coal here is only from 10 to 12 feet under the surface and it taken out will ruin the street and this property.

American Liners Strengthened For Possible Future Naval Use

Even before the government decided to arm American vessels and notified foreign governments to that effect, work was done on the American Line vessels to fit them for possible future naval use. In the Spanish-American war the government took over the American Line ships and converted them into cruisers. It is expected that these vessels, which are speedy, although not nearly so fast as some of the newer ships of the German and British lines, will be very useful in case of a clash with Germany. Work on the Philadelphia, to strengthen her superstructure, is shown in the picture.

STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Relieves Head-Colds at Once.

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stifled and you can't breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed, swollen mucous membrane and you get instant relief. Ah! how good it feels. Your nostrils are open, your head is clear, no more hawking, sneezing, blowing, no more headache, dryness or struggling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.—Adv.

Doctor Tells How To Strengthen Eyesight 50 per cent In One Week's Time in Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home

Philadelphia, Pa. Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye strain or other eye weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses. It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discern them in a reasonable time and intelligences more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Ben-Opto Tablets. Drop one Ben-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eye two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cured for their eyes in time.

Notes: Another prominent physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Ben-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. The manufacturer guarantees it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." It is sold in this city by J. C. Moore.

COKE CONTRACT SITUATION IS GAINING IN STRENGTH

As Prospects Increase That Coke is Certain to be Very Scarce.

$8 PRICE FOR LAST HALF

Is View of Operators: Buyers Not Now Actively in the Market but With the Advancing Prices of Pig Iron Not Likely to Chances on Covering Coke.

Special to The Weekly Courier. PITTSBURGH, Mar. 14.—While the spot coke market has naturally eased off somewhat now that the winter is over, the contract situation is stronger than ever, prospects having increased that coke, like coal, is almost certain to be very scarce for a long time to come.

Leading coke operators are talking of $8.00 as the prospective price for furnace coke for the second half of the year. They are more confident in this view since there were no selling foundry coke for second half at $5.00 and $7.00 have withdrawn those prices. Buyers, however, have as yet shown no disposition to pay anything like $8.00 and have not been active in the market. Prices they are now obtaining for pig iron, however, are likely to cause them to take more interest in getting covered on coke, as they cannot take any chances as to operating full when consumers are willing to pay them such prices for pig iron.

Nearly all coke operations had relatively good car supplies the closing days of last week, and supplies have been still better this week. Supplies are still far below the allotments, however, and if present conditions, now that spring is almost arrived, are any indication as to the future there will be no full supplies of cars as long as the present industrial activity continues. The next thing feared is a fresh reduction in car supplies as the season of late deliveries opens and coal cars are required in that direction. There has not been much of a test of the labor supply lately, on account of the poor car supplies, and many operators fear that if they were given full car supplies they would find they did not have enough labor to make the coke required to load them.

By far the most acute scarcity of box cars the region has ever experienced has obtained the past few days. At several plants usually allotted a fair sprinkling of box cars there have been hardly any. While many consumers have gotten used to taking foundry coke in open cars there are some who object, and lately there has been considerable bidding for box cars by way of offering a premium for coke thus shipped. As high as $12.25 is mentioned for foundry coke shipped this way. The market, however, is quotable on the basis of open cars as much of the turnover in spot foundry coke for months past has involved open cars. The box car market would now be a separate proposition.

There has been little activity in foundry coke on contract since the early prices were withdrawn. Even at the advance prices producers seem quite unwilling to sell and the wonder of the trade is that they were willing to sell at all at the lower prices quoted two or three weeks ago. The market is quotable as follows:

Spot furnace $5.00 to $5.50
Contract furnace $7.00 to $7.50
Spot foundry $11.00 to $12.00
Contract foundry $15.00 to $16.00

Only one of the five Lorain blast furnaces is banked now, against four ten days ago. There are few banked furnaces altogether at present, but many furnaces are operating at less than full capacity.

The coal market has eased off rather sharply, with better car supplies, and is now quotable as follows: Slack, $1.00 to $1.25; steam mine-run, $1.00 to $1.25; 3-inch gas, $1.25 to $1.50, per net ton at mine. Pittsburgh district. The contract market on the other hand, has stiffened, with the minimum quotation $3.50 and operators not much disposed to sell at that figure.

Basic pig iron, long at $30.00, Valley, has started to move, fully 40,000 tons having been sold during the past few days for various deliveries; none at under $31.00, Valley, and the latest at $32.00 and even up to $33.00. Still higher prices are being quoted. Bessemer is up at least $1 a ton, while foundry iron is stiffer. The market is quotable strong as follows:

Bessemer $34.00 to $37.00
Basic $32.00 to $33.00
No. 2 foundry $32.00 to $33.00
Malleable $35.00 to $36.00
Gray forge $31.00 to $32.00

COKE TRADE SUMMARY.

Coke shipments made a respectable gain last week but not enough to recoup the loss of the week preceding. The total was 55,000 tons, a gain of 5,000 tons, which brought the week well up among the best records of the year to date.

Weather conditions and car supply again will for this week. The coke region views the railroad strike with more or less equanimity. It is realized that it will cause suspension of iron and steel making, hence it is believed the suspension might as well be made general as to clear the way for a permanent settlement of the trainmen's grievances.

There has been a slight easing in the spot market but the contract situation is stronger than ever, consumers realizing that coke, like coal, is certain to be very scarce for a long time to come. Operators are talking $5.00 for furnace coke on second half contract, but buyers have shown no disposition to close at that figure.

Since former prices on contract foundry were withdrawn there has been little activity. Producers were unwilling to sell at the advance prices which now range $7.50 to $8.00. Spot furnace has eased to $5.50 to $6.00.

These prices are f. o. b. Valley furnaces, prices delivered Pittsburgh being higher by the 55 cents freight.

THE MOST RAPID ADVANCES

In History of the Steel Industry Have Been Made During Past Week; Market at Standstill.

Special to The Weekly Courier. NEW YORK, March 14.—The American Metal Market and Daily Iron & Steel Report will review the steel and iron trade tomorrow as follows:

Steel prices have been advancing by far the most rapid rate in the whole history of the steel industry. Following the advances of $4 a ton in pipe and wire products last Monday week, bars and shapes were advanced on Thursday by $7 a ton and plates by $15, while since then sheets have become quotable $5 a ton higher. These advances cover the entire range of important finished steel products except tin plates, which are practically unquotable at any figure.

The steel market now seems to be sold to a standstill, except in a very few lines in which the mills have refused to open their books for deliveries beyond a certain date. Even the small mills, which aim to keep their order books open for early deliveries, are congested with orders.

There has been considerable buying of steel for government account and much more is under negotiation. The mills are settling the business down for such delivery as is desired, quite irrespective of other obligations, and the prices done with the government have no regular relation to current market prices.

Very little export business has been entered lately, and not much is under negotiation, but there is a large tonnage rolled still awaiting shipment, and a still larger tonnage awaiting rolling.

The termination of all existing shell contracts March 31st will release considerable tonnages of unfinished steel, now passing as forging billets to shell makers. The rolling of large rounds for either domestic or foreign shell manufacture, practically ceased some time ago. There is scarcely any interest on the part of consumers in forward billets and the market does not show the strength exhibited by finished products. In some quarters a shortage of finishing capacity, or an excess in steel making capacity, is predicted to develop within a few months.

Pig iron continues to advance irregularly.

KAZAN

JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD

Food came more easily than voice toward midday he cornered a big white rabbit under a log, and killed it. The warm flesh and blood was better than frozen fish, or fallow and brown and the feast he had gave him confidence. That afternoon he chased many rabbits, and killed two more. Until now he had never known the delight of pursuing and killing at will even though he did not eat all he killed.

But there was no light in the rabbit. They died too easily. They were very sweet and tender to eat, when he was hungry, but the first thrill of killing them passed away after a time. He wanted something bigger. He no longer slunk along as if he were afraid, or as if he wanted to remain hidden. He held his head up. His back bristled. His tail swung free and busily, like a wolf's. Every hair in his body quivered with the electric energy of life and action. He traveled north and west. It was the call of early days—the days away from the Mackenzie. The Mackenzie was a thousand miles away.

He came upon many trails in the snow that day, and sniffed the scents left by the hoofs of moose and caribou, and the fur-padded feet of a lynx. He followed a fox, and the trail led him to a place shut in by tall spruce, where the snow was broken down and red-stained with blood. There was no caribou here, but a trail of blood led him to a place where a caribou had been killed. He sniffed the blood and the scent of the caribou, and he knew that there were other hunters about besides himself.

Toward evening he came upon tracks in the snow that were very much like his own. They were quite fresh, and there was a warm scent about them that made him shiver, and filled him again with that desire to fall back upon his haunches and send forth that wolf-cry. This desire grew stronger to him as the shadows of night deepened in the forest. He had tried all day, but he was not tired. There was something about night, now that there were no men near, that exhilarated him strangely. The wolf blood in him ran swift and swift. Tonight it was clear. The sky was filled with stars. The snow rose and at last he settled back in the snow and turned his head straight up to the spruce tops, and the wolf came out of him in a long, mournful cry which quivered through the still night for miles.

For a long time he sat and listened after that howl. He had found voices—a voice with a strange new note in it, and it gave him still greater confidence. He had expected an answer, but none came. He had traveled in the face of the wind and as he howled, a bull moose crashed through the scrub timber ahead of him, his horns rattling against the trees like the tattoo of a clear brass club as he put distance between himself and that cry.

Twice Kazan howled before he went on, and he found joy in the practice of that new note. He came then to the foot of a rough ridge and turned up out of the swamp to the top of it. The stars and the moon were near to him there and on the other side of the ridge he looked down upon a great sweeping plain, with a frozen lake glittering in the moonlight and a white river leading from it off into timber that was neither so thick nor so black as that in the swamp.

And then every muscle in his body grew tense, and his blood leaped from far off in the plain there came a cry. It was his cry—the wolf cry. His jaws snapped. His white fangs gleamed, and he growled deep in his throat. He wanted to reply, but some strange instinct urged him not to. That instinct of the wild was already becoming master of him. In the air, in the whispering of the spruce tops, in the moon and the stars themselves there breathed a spirit which told him that what he had heard was the wolf-cry, but that it was not the wolf-cry.

The other came an hour later, clear and distinct, that same wailing howl at the beginning—but ending in a staccato of quick sharp yelps that stirred his blood at once into a fiery excitement that he had never known before. The same instinct told him that this was the call—the hunt-cry. It urged him to come quickly. A few moments later it came again, and this time there was a reply from close down along the foot of the ridge and another from so far away that Kazan could scarcely hear it. The hunt-pack was gathering for the night chase; but Kazan sat quiet and trembling.

He was not afraid, but he was not ready to go. The ridge seemed to spit the world for him. Down there it was now, and strange, and without man. From the other side something seemed pulling him back, and suddenly he turned his head and gazed back through the moonlit space behind him, and whined it was the dog-whine now. The woman was back there. He could hear her voice. He could feel the touch of her soft hand. He could see the laughter in her face and eyes the laughter that had made him warm and happy. She was calling to him through the forests, and he was torn between desire to answer that call, and desire to go down into the plain. For he could also see many men waiting for him with clubs, and he could hear the crackling of whips, and feel the sting of their lashes.

For a long time he remained on the top of the ridge that divided his world. And then at last he turned and went down into the plain.

CHAPTER V.

Leader of the Pack. All that night Kazan kept close to the hunt-pack, but never quite approached it. This was fortunate for him. He still bore the scent of traces, and of man. The pack would have torn him to pieces. The first instinct of the wild is that of self preservation. It may have been this a whisper back through the years of savage forebears that made Kazan roll in the snow now and then where the feet of the pack had trod the thickest.

That night the pack killed a caribou on the edge of the lake, and feasted until nearly dawn. Kazan hung in the face of the wind. The smell of blood and of warm flesh tickled his nostrils, and his sharp ears could catch the crackling of bones. But the instinct was stronger than the temptation.

Not until broad day when the pack had scattered far and wide over the plain did he go boldly to the scene of the kill. He found nothing but an area of blood-red-stained snow covered with bones entailed and torn bits of tough hide. But it was enough and he rolled in it, and buried his nose in what was left and remained all that day close to it, saturating himself with the scent of it.

That night, when the moon and the stars came out again, he sat back with fear and hesitation no longer in him, and announced himself to his new comrades of the great plain.

The pack hunted again that night or else it was a new pack that started miles to the south, and came up with a dog caribou to the big frozen lake. The night was almost as clear as day, and from the edge of the forest Kazan saw the caribou run out on the lake a third of a mile away. The pack was about a dozen strong and had already split into two fatal horseshoe formations the two leaders running almost abreast of the kill and slowly closing in.

With a sharp yelp Kazan darted out into the moonlight. He was directly in the path of the dog caribou, and here down upon her with lightning speed. Two hundred yards away the dog saw him and turned to the right and the leader on that side met her with open jaws. Kazan was in with the second leader, and leaped at the dog's soft throat. In a swirling mass the pack closed in from behind and the dog went down, with Kazan laid under her body, his nose sunk deep in her hair. She lay heavily on him, but he did not lose his hold. It was his first big kill. His blood ran like fire. He snarled between his clamped teeth.

Not until the last quiver had left the body over him did he pull himself out from under her chest and forelegs. He had killed a rabbit that day and he was not hungry. So he sat back in the snow and waited, while the ravenous pack tore at the dead dog. After a fit he came nearer, nosed in between two of them, and was slipped for his intrusion.

As Kazan drew back still hesitating to mix with his wild brothers a big gray form leaped out of the pack, and drove straight for his throat. It had just time to throw his shoulder to the attack, and for a moment the two rolled over and over in the snow. They were up before the excitement of sudden battle had drawn the pack from the feast. Slowly they circled about each other, their white fangs bare, their yellowish backs bristling like brushes. The fatal ring of wolves drew about the fighters.

It was not new to Kazan. A dozen times he had sat in rings like this, waiting for the final moment. More than once he had fought for his life within the circle. It was the dog-whine way of fighting. Unless man intervened with a club or a whip it always ended in death. Only one fighter could come out alive. Sometimes both died. And there was no man here—only that fatal cordon of waiting white-fanged demons, ready to leap upon and tear to pieces the first of the fighters who was thrown upon his side or back. Kazan was a stranger, but he did not fear those that hummed him in. The one great law of the pack would compel him to be fair.

He kept his eyes only on the big gray leader who had challenged him. Shoulder to shoulder they continued to circle. When a few moments before there had been the snapping of jaws and the rustling of flesh there was now silence. Soft footed and soft-throated mongrel dogs from the south would have snarled and growled, but Kazan and the wolf were still, their ears laid forward instead of back, their tails free and bushy.

Suddenly the wolf struck in with the softness of lightning, and his jaws came together with the sharpness of steel striking steel. They missed by an inch. In that same instant Kazan's teeth gnashed the wolf's flank. The wolf circled again, their eyes growing redder, their lips drawn back until they seemed to have disappeared. And then Kazan leaped for that death-grip at the throat—and missed. It was only by an inch again, and the wolf came back, as he had done and laid open Kazan's flank so that the blood ran down his leg and ruddened the snow. The burn of that rank-wound told Kazan that his enemy was old in the game of fighting. He crouched low, his head straight out, and his throat close to the snow. It was a trick Kazan had learned in puppyhood—to shield his throat, and wait.

And the wolf circled about him, and Kazan played slowly his eyes half closed. A second time the wolf leaped and Kazan threw up his terrible jaws, sure of that fatal leap in front of the forelegs. His teeth snapped on empty air. With the nimbleness of a cat the wolf had gone completely over his back.

The trick had failed and with a rumble of the dog-snarl in his throat, Kazan reached the wolf in a single bound. They met breast to breast. Their fangs clashed and with the whole weight of his body, Kazan flung himself against the wolf's shoulders, cleared his jaws, and struck again for the throat hold. It was another miss—by a hair's breadth—and before he could recover, the wolf's teeth were buried in the back of his neck.

For the first time in his life Kazan felt the terror and the pain of the death-grip, and with a mighty effort he flung his head a little forward and under his own weight. His powerful jaws closed on the wolf's foreleg close to the body. There was a cracking of bone and a crunching of flesh and the circle of waiting wolves grew tense and alert. One of the other of the fighters was sure to go down before the holds were broken, and they but awaited that fatal fall as a signal to leap in to the death.

Only the thickness of hair and hide on the back of Kazan's neck, and the toughness of his muscles, saved him from that terrible fate of the vanquished. The wolf's teeth sank deep, but not deep enough to reach the vital spot and suddenly Kazan put every ounce of strength in his limbs to the effort, and flung himself up bodily from under the animal's jaws. The grip on his neck relaxed, and with another leaping leap he tore himself free.

As swift as a whiplash he whirled on the broken-legged leader of the pack and with the full lurch and weight of his shoulders struck him fairly in the side. More deadly than the throat-grip had Kazan sometimes found the lunge when delivered at the right moment. It was deadly now. The big gray wolf lost his feet, rolled upon his back for an instant, and the pack rushed in eager to rend the last of life from the leader whose power had ceased to exist.

From out of that gray snarling bloody-lipped mass Kazan drew back snarling and bleeding. He was weak. There was a curious sickness in his head. He wanted to lie down in the snow. But the old and inflexible instinct warned him not to betray that weakness. I run out of the pack a slim little gray wolf came up to him and lay down in the snow before him and then rose swiftly and snuffed at his wounds.

She was young and strong and beautiful but Kazan did not look at her. Where the fight had been he was looking, at what little remained of the leader. The pack had returned to the feast. He heard again the crackling of bones and the rustling of flesh and something told him that the center of all the wilderness would hear and recognize his voice and that when he sat back on his haunches and called to the moon and the stars, those swift-footed hunters of the big plain would respond to it. He circled twice about the caribou and the pack, and then trotted off to the edge of the black spruce forest.

When he reached the shadows he looked back. Gray Wolf was following him. She was only a few yards behind. And now she came up to him a little timidly, and she too, looked back to the dark blot of life out on the lake. And as she stood there close beside him, Kazan sniffed at something in the air that was not the scent of blood nor the perfume of the balsam and spruce. It was a thing that seemed to come to him from the clear stars, the cloudless moon the strange and beautiful quiet of the night itself. And his presence seemed to be a part of Gray Wolf.

He looked at her, and he found Gray Wolf's eyes alert and questioning. She was young—so young that she seemed scarcely to have passed out of puppyhood. Her body was strong and slim and beautifully shaped. In the moonlight the hair under her throat and along her back shone sleek and soft. She whined at the red staring light in Kazan's eyes, and it was not a puppy's whimper. Kazan moved toward her and stood with his head over her back facing the pack. He felt her trembling against his chest. He looked at the moon and the stars again, the mystery of Gray Wolf and of the night throbbing in his blood.

Not much of his life had been spent at the posts. Most of it had been on the trail—in the traces—and the spirit of the mating season had only stirred him from afar. But it was very near now. Gray Wolf stood her head. Her soft muzzle touched the wound on his neck and in the gentleness of that touch, in the low sound in her throat, Kazan felt and heard again that wonderful something that had come with the caress of the woman's hand and the sound of her voice.

He turned whirling his back bristling, his head high and defiant of the wilderness which he faced. Gray Wolf trotted close at his side as they entered into the gloom of the forest.

CHAPTER VI.

The Fight in the Snow. They found shelter that night under thick balsam, and when they lay down on the soft carpet of needles which the snow had not covered Gray Wolf snuggled her warm body close to Kazan and licked his wounds. The day broke with a velvet fall of snow so white and thick that they could not see a dog's leaps ahead of him in the

Instead of the thousands of sickly anaemic looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions instead of the multitudes of nerve-wracked, indolent, brain-fagged, and pessimistic we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-checked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning before breakfast a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of Limestone phosphate in it. Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds and particularly those who have a quiet, rather complex complexion and who are constipated very often are urged to obtain a quartal pound of Limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

open. It was quite warm and so still that the whole world seemed filled with only the flutter and whisper of the snowflakes. Through this day Kazan and Gray Wolf traveled side by side. Time and again he turned his head back to the ridge over which he had come, and Gray Wolf could not understand the strange note that trembled in his throat.

In the afternoon they returned to what was left of the caribou doe on the lake. In the edge of the forest Gray Wolf hung back. She did not yet know the meaning of poison baits, deadfalls and traps but the instinct of numberless generations was in her veins and it told her there was danger in visiting a second time a thing that had grown cold in death.

Kazan had seen masters work about carcasses that the wolves had left. He had seen them conceal traps cleverly, and roll little capsules of strychnine in the fat of the entrails, and once he had put a foreleg in a trap and had experienced its sting and pain and kindly grip. But he did not have Gray Wolf's fear. He urged her to accompany him to the white haunches on the ice and at last she went with him and snarled back restlessly on her haunches, while he dug out the bones and pieces of flesh that the snow had kept from freezing. But she would not eat and at last Kazan went and sat on his haunches at her side, and with her looked at what he had dug out from under the snow. He sniffed the air. He could not smell danger but Gray Wolf told him that it might be there.

She told him many other things in the days and nights that followed. The third night Kazan himself gathered the hunt-pack and led in the chase. Three times that month, before the moon left the skies, he led the chase and each time there was a kill. But as the snows began to grow softer under his feet he found a greater and greater companionship in Gray Wolf and they hunted alone, living on the big white rabbits.

In all the world he had loved but two things the girl with the shining hair and the hands that had caressed him—and Gray Wolf.

He did not leave the big plain and often he took his mate to the top of the ridge and he would try to tell her what he had left back there. With the dark nights the call of the woman became so strong upon him that he was filled with a longing to go back, and take Gray Wolf with him.

Something happened very soon after that. They were crossing the open plain one day when up on the face of the ridge Kazan saw something that made his heart stand still. A man with a dog sled and team was coming down into their world. The wind had not warned them and suddenly Kazan saw something glister in the man's hand. He knew what it was. It was the thing that spat fire and thunder, and killed.

He gave his warning to Gray Wolf and they were off like the wind side by side. And then came the sound—and Kazan's heart burst forth in a snarl as he leaped. There was a queer humming over their heads. The sound from behind came again and this time Gray Wolf gave a yelp of pain, and rolled over in the snow. She was on her feet again in an instant, and Kazan dropped behind her, and ran these until they reached the shelter of the timber. Gray Wolf lay down, and began licking the wound in her shoulder. Kazan faced the ridge. The man was taking up their trail. He stopped where Gray Wolf had fallen, and examined the snow. Then he came on.

Kazan urged Gray Wolf to her feet, and they made for the thick swamp close to the lake. All that day they kept in the face of the wind, and when Gray Wolf lay down Kazan stole back over their trail watching and sniffling the air.

New Idea in a Neckruff And How to Make It

A great many of the new Coats and Suit Jackets close high about the throat, and the powder on the face rubs off onto the collar. This Neckruff prevents that. It also prevents the coat collar from straining the neck.

HOW TO MAKE IT!—Take a yard of Fancy Ribbon, 5 inches wide or wider; plait it, bringing it down to 1 1/2 inches in length which is the average neck size. The plait begins in the back as a box-plait. One and one-fourth inches from the top edge put the first row of stitches, and 2 inches below these put the second row. Use snap fasteners for closing.

Gay and Fantastic Necklaces Are Selling Quite Briskly.

They are splendidly in keeping with the other styles of the season, and their very oddity imparts to them a decided appeal.

Formed of bright colored stones, little chains and carved metal beads. The combinations are unusual and particularly effective.

There are imitation jade, amethyst, lapis, turquoise, and coral combined with metal ornaments and novelty beads, and there is a great variety of styles.

One day Pete, realizing that Evelyn is mourning for her child who has died, determines to secure the child for her. So he climbs over the palace wall, reaches the king's baby from the royal crib and runs with it to the top of a 350 foot chimney. Evelyn decides to save the king's heir. Reaching the top of the chimney, she tears the baby from Pete's grasp and burles the monkey to death. See this wonderful thrilling production and see what the ending of this drama is. THE PARAMOUNT.

"KITTY MACKAY."—Presenting Lillian Walker, the charming Vitagraph actress and a roaring comedy are today's attractions. "Kitty Mackay" is a five reel Vitagraph blue ribbon feature and is the romantic story in detourlines to secure the child for her. Reaching the top of the chimney, she tears the baby rallings on the more pretentious dwellings. Now and then a rustic cart drawn by a small donkey appears on the scene and the Scotch people offers many wonderful types when they gather at the village square for the laying of the cornerstone. To watch Miss Walker happily jig the Scottish steps in the different story one would believe she had loaned them in her babyhood and practised them ever since. This is not the case, however, for she learned them especially for this picture. Miss Walker does a true Scottish jig close to the camera's eye. Miss Walker wears wools worn in bonny Scotland years and years ago and charming indeed is she in the attractive hoop skirts, tight fitting jackets and flower-decked bonnets. Miss Walker is ably supported by Donald Cameron who portrays the part of a man of nobility, who leads his company of kilted warriors from Scotland. Tomorrow Wallace Reid and Anita King will be featured in "The Golden Fetter," a five part Paramount attraction.

charming and pretty in this feature. The setting of this play is the Panama Exposition. It is the story of two little girls who are sent to their aunt's home in Hawaii. Here they are put to work and treated very badly. They are befriended by the son of the ex-governor of Hawaii. He is a sort of a scapegrace and sings in the Hawaiian village. He takes the girls there. Later his parents come after him, but he will not return home, unless the girls become members of the family. Later they are rescued from death by the son and the parents, touched by this earnestness of purpose, decide to take the girls home with them. Tomorrow Valkyrie, or Baroness De Wit, appears in the five reel drama, "Image Makers." She has the featured role in this picture when parallels a story of ancient Egypt with one of modern times. ARCADE THEATRE.

"THOSE WHO TOIL."—At the Arcade today is the famous emotional actress, Miss Nance O'Neill in Dr.

Goodman's story of capital and labor, "Those Who Toil." Labor and capital meet half way to grasp hands to settle their disputes. But it occurs only after a thrilling story of individual conflict in which laborers, union delegates, strike breakers, and high finance are engaged. In her vivid portrayal of a daughter of the people, Miss O'Neill reaches the pinnacle of her emotional art. On Friday will be Thomas Comenford in "A Failure at Fifty." George Larkin and Ollie Kerby in "The Wizard's Plot," an adventure of Grant, the police reporter, Kate Price and Billy Ruse in a Vim comedy, "Terrible Kate," and J. E. Sloane in a Vitagraph comedy, "Where is Your Friend?" On Saturday will be Marguerite Nichols in "Jess of the Hill Country." Neil Craig and Edward Arnold in a Texas drama, "The Border Line." Rosemary Theby in "Bobby's Chicken," and Ham and Bud in "The Safety Pin Smugglers." The shows at the Arcade have been all good lately and it would be difficult to pick out that which pleased the most. The program has been made up of three reel, two reel and one reel features, with every inch of film full of action. This will be characteristic of pictures made in the next few months by the leading company releasing through the Mutual and General exchanges.
